BIOGRAPHY

Ronald Kentrell Russell Jr., formerly known in the entertainment industry as Bruser, is a captivating speaker, author, and advocate for transformation. Born in Carrollton, Georgia, Ronald's life journey is a testament to resilience and redemption.

Once aspiring to be a professional football player, he found himself immersed in the music industry, collaborating with renowned artists such as Waka Flocka and Gucci Mane.

However, the pull of street life led him into gang involvement and incarceration.

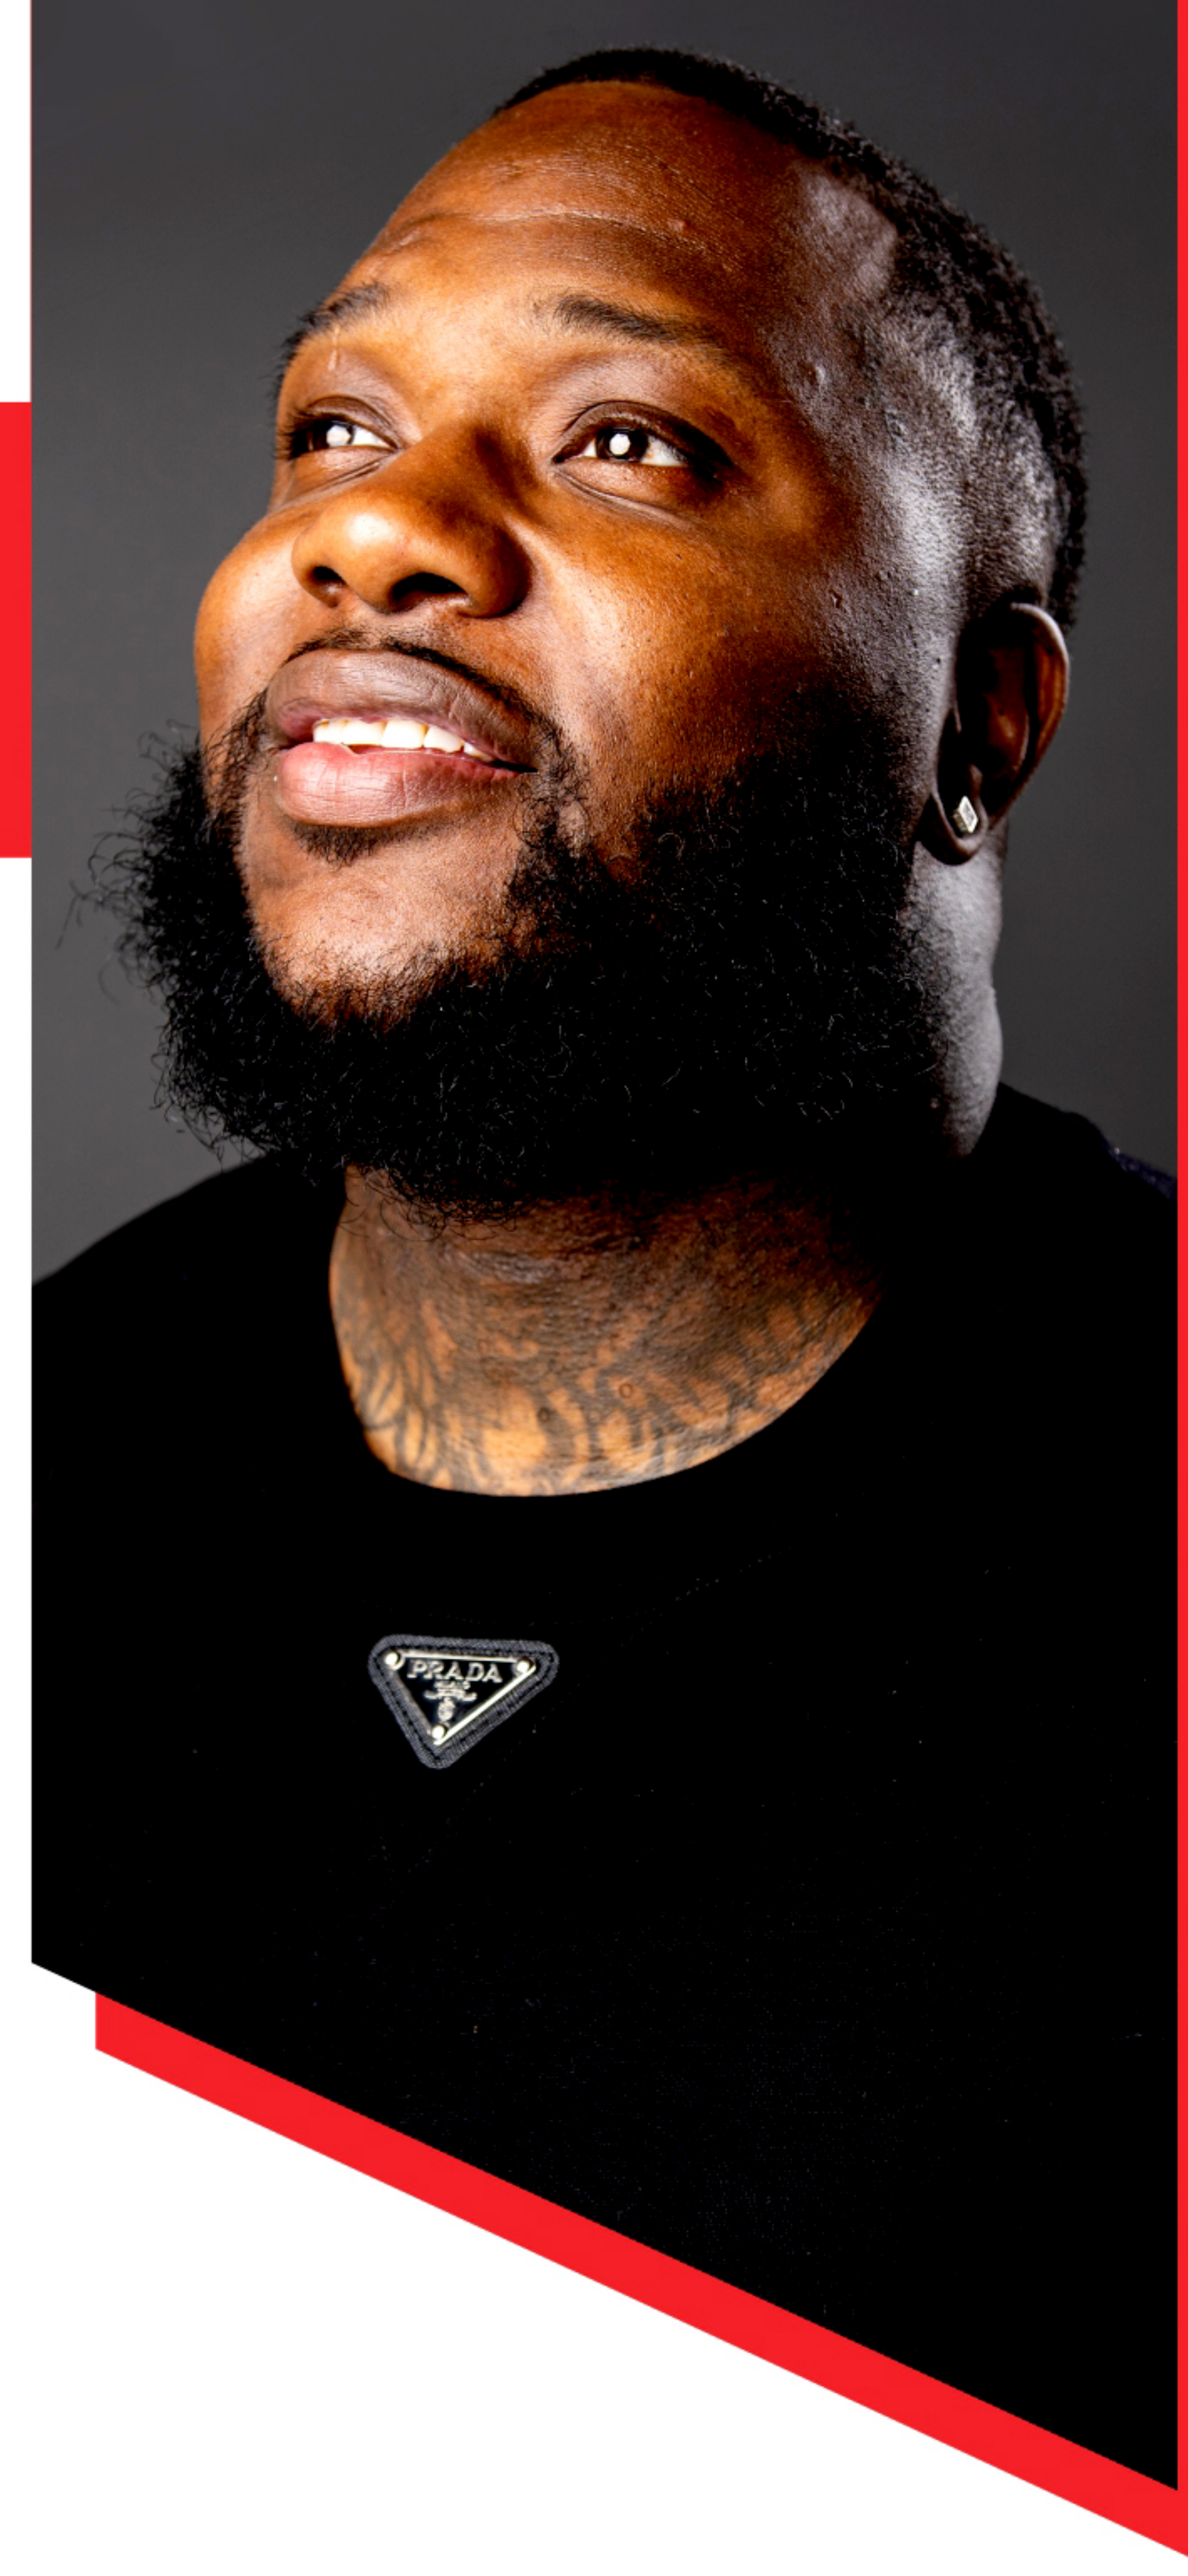

During his time in prison, a profound near-death experience—where he was pronounced dead for 32 minutes—became a pivotal moment that awakened his faith and redefined his life's purpose. In his book 32, Ronald shares his extraordinary testimony, using the number 32 as a powerful symbol of survival, transformation, and divine intervention.

Today, Ronald is a sought-after speaker, traveling across the nation to inspire audiences at conferences, schools, prisons, and community events. His keynote topics address critical issues such as the dangers of gang life, rebuilding futures for felons, navigating the entertainment industry, and embracing one's divine purpose. Ronald's message is one of hope, resilience, and the boundless possibilities of transformation.
